The Missouri House of Representatives, by a vote of S7 to S has passed a memorial petitioning Congress to call a convention for the purpose of framing an amend ment to the national constitution to provide for the election of Uni ted States Senators by direct vote of the people. The popular branch think that he was morbid or despond Justice, on hearing the news of compliance with public sentiment and one of the means provided by the constitution for amending that justrument, passed resolutions to amend the constitution in this regard to be submitted for ratification to the Legislatures of the several States, but they have been invariably ignored in the Senate, not withstanding the fact that the Legislatures of most of the States have from time to time memorialized Congress to submit such an amendment. But the constitution provides for another means by which it may be amended, and that means is invoked by the resolution passed by the Missouri House of Representatives. The national constitution says in article five that Congress, "on the application of the Legislatures of two-thirds of the several States, shall call a convention for proposing amendments. It says Congress "shall," but the trouble is to get two-thirds of the State Legislatures to act in concert in the matter, or to agree that the day. necessity for such an amendment is so great as to demand the calling of a convention to do what the United States Senate has so persistently refused to do.
